Regina Coeli Report

Number 266 October - November 2015 ∴

Angelus Press

This issue of the Regina Coeli Report is all about Angelus Press. Angelus Press is a unique institution in its scope and mission. In its own words, it is involved in “spreading the Faith through the printed word by books and magazine publications. It offers resources ranging from the promotion of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, the spiritual life, and lives of the Saints, to the crisis in the Church, theology, liturgy, and catechetics—anything that will help the Christian save his soul.” Find out about Angelus Press’s role in SSPX communications in the U.S. District, how it helps our schools, sends printed materials to prisoners and foreign missions; and a sneak peek at future plans. Interviews with Fr. Dominique Bourmaud, Mr. James Vogel and Miss Rebecca Heatwole shed light on The Angelus magazine and the annual conference on Catholic Tradition.

Publishing

Angelus Press publishes a wide variety of materials, not just books. Working with various partners, Angelus Press offers over 300 products including audio books, digital downloads, music CDs, sacramental records, greeting cards, medals and calendars. It is one of the few places you can pick up a new copy of the 1962 Roman Catholic Daily Missal, coloring posters for your toddlers, and workbooks for your school age children. It is easy to order what you need by calling 800-966-7337 or visiting www.angeluspress.org to place your order.

Letter from the District Superior

Dear faithful,

The 21st century is certainly an era of instant communications. With the speed of change in the virtual world, no one can imagine by what new ways and waves the message will reach its recipients. And yet, oddly enough, as the means of exchange grow, the weight of the message and its ability to find a captive audience diminishes exponentially. Much is said, but much about trivial things reaching mindless people.

Faced with these challenges, the SSPX is committed to transmit the legacy of the Catholic Church and of Archbishop Lefebvre in the Church and the world. This involves reaching people wherever we can through the media.

Social media demands that we be present online and that we unite our efforts in this matter. Today, people depend more on visuals than on the word for information and education. Yet, since “faith comes from hearing,” pride of place will always be given to the word, whether written or spoken. The printed press was the great means of reaching souls ever since Gutenberg’s Bible, St. Francis de Sales being its great advocate.

From the outset of its apostolate in the US, Archbishop Lefebvre set up Angelus Press for book publications. This includes The Angelus, a then monthly and now bimonthly magazine, to reach souls by the written word. The spoken word is the typical way of transmitting the Faith; this is done with the Sunday sermon, study circles, and catechism classes. The latest addition to this is the Angelus Press Conference, which gathers a large group of like-minded traditionalists for a weekend of educational and original talks on a theme pertinent to our day.

May this issue give our readers a taste for deepening their faith, a will to open a good book, a wish to subscribe to The Angelus and—why not!—attend the next Angelus Press conference.

I thank you for your tireless prayers and generosity.

With my blessing for you and your families,
Yours in Her Immaculate Heart,

Fr. Jürgen Wegner

Communications

Angelus Press takes advantage of many different channels of communication to assist the U.S. District. From movies to audio CDs of conference lectures to a documentary about Archbishop Lefebvre, Angelus Press reaches people who are interested in learning more about the Catholic faith where they are. There are many ways to connect:

Education

Education has always been part of the Society’s work in the U.S. District. Angelus Press provides invaluable assistance in this area by publishing textbooks, workbooks, and supplementary school supplies; primarily for teachers as part of implementing curriculum standards and educational concepts recommended by subject specific District Education committees in the last five years under the direction of Fr. Gerard Beck, First Assistant.

2. Audio CDs of the annual conference are also available for delivery by mail or as digital downloads at www.angeluspress.org

About The Angelus magazine

What is the mission of The Angelus magazine?

The Angelus, since 1978, has been the journal of Tradition for Catholics in the midst of the crisis in the Church. We provide sound Catholic doctrine, commentary on the news, and reflections on the spiritual life, primarily for families. We strive to have something in each issue for everyone: theological studies, brief questions and answers, historical and cultural considerations, and so on.

Who likes to receive the Angelus Magazine? Who are the articles for?

Our readership is fairly broad: we have fathers and mothers, priests and seminarians, Catholics inside and outside Tradition. Our focus is primarily for parents, as they bear the burden of having to raise faithful Catholics in an increasingly hostile world. Our new format, however, allows enough pages that there is something for every Catholic, no matter his or her state in life.

What are some of the challenges in putting together The Angelus? How do you choose the theme for each issue?

There are both external and internal challenges. From the outside, there is the decline of print media in general; we know magazines as a vehicle for content are not as popular as they once were. Nevertheless, we provide analysis and perspectives that one cannot find in the sound byte-driven media online. Internally, we try to keep word counts to a minimum in order to encourage readers; this means more work for the authors! The themes are chosen by an editorial team, comprised of priests and laymen. The general goal is to alternate between doctrinal and practical themes, if we can make such a distinction.

What are future plans for the magazine?

God willing, to continue growing, and reach more and more Catholics seeking an oasis of sanity. There are plans to make the online/electronic version more accessible, especially for tablets and mobile phones.

Otherwise, we do not intend to re-invent the wheel that has been turning for almost 40 years!

How do people subscribe and what are the costs?

You can subscribe to either the print or online version through our website, or by phone. The price varies depending on the length of the subscription and where you live. Generally, for an American who wants the print version—our most popular option—it is $45 a year. It's a full-color, 88 page publication on high-quality paper; we take pride in being at the forefront of traditional Catholic magazines, both in content and style.

Prison & Foreign Missions

Every week, Angelus Press receives letters from prisoners asking for basic items like catechisms and bibles. Some also receive The Angelus magazine and various reading materials. Angelus Press also works with St. Joseph's Prison Ministry in Colorado. It would be easy to expand this important work as the demand is so great. Donations can help cover the cost of shipping and allow Angelus Press to send books and other materials at cost. Often prisoners must wait for their requests to be filled until extra funds become available.

Foreign missions of the SSPX use various printed materials to spread the Gospel. In places like the Philippines and Africa returns, slightly damaged books and old editions are sent to our priests requesting materials. For the foreign missions, Angelus Press accepts donations of certain published materials, but funds to cover the costs to ship God's Word to faraway places are urgently needed.

About the Annual Conference

Each year the Angelus Press hosts a conference on some aspect of the Catholic faith in Kansas City, MO. It features special guest speakers and topics of interest to the faithful. Mr. James Vogel, Editor for Angelus Press and Miss Rebecca Heatwole, Conference Coordinator tell us how this wonderful event happens.

How does the annual Angelus Press Conference become a reality?

JV: It begins by working with the District Superior and the communications team discussing what theme we want to focus on every year. From there, naturally, we discuss various topics and speakers we might invite; there are always more ideas than we can use, which is a good problem. After that, we move to the practical questions: coordinating the team at Angelus Press, working with the hotel and the speakers, and publicizing the event. At the conference itself, I am the MC and try to keep the conferences running well.

RH: I plan all the pieces that directly affect our attendees. That includes setting up online registration, ordering supplies, scheduling shuttle buses, and putting together registration packets. I also coordinate volunteers. When the conference begins, I become the liaison between Angelus Press and the hotel staff. It's my job to make sure behind-the-scenes at the conference runs smoothly.

How does the planning process work?

JV: First, it involves brainstorming: even though it's a whole weekend, we can never cover a topic as thoroughly as it deserves. When you look at the topics we've addressed—such as the Mass and Our Lady—the possibilities are endless. So we try to determine what is most important and what people need to hear today. After that, it's mainly practical. We are fortunate to have a great team that answers questions by phone, keeps track of registrations, and coordinates travel for our speakers and guests.

RH: We begin with a post-conference meeting where we discuss every aspect of what worked or didn't; we take this very seriously when planning the next conference. Then we look at previous and current costs to figure out pricing. At this point we can set up package and promotions deals for the attendees. Then we look at how online registration will work and how it will be integrated with our website.

How do you know you've made a difference?

JV: First and foremost, it's hearing from the priests and religious who attend from "outside Tradition." At least in one case, we played a small part in a priest coming to the Society of St. Pius X. Beyond that, the feedback we've received from the faithful is overwhelmingly positive: what they've learned, and how much they have enjoyed a weekend of spiritual nourishment and camaraderie with fellow traditional Catholics. Of course, we record these conferences, so they're not just frozen in time.

RH: I know we have made a difference when guests are so appreciative of all that went into making their weekend unforgettable. Every year people come to me on Sunday to express their gratitude for how well the conference was run. I often hear about how amazing the speakers were, and how they can't wait to sign up for the next one!

Any plans for future conferences?

JV: This is already our sixth year and we plan to continue as long as Providence wills. We have some ideas for future themes, but we always welcome feedback and suggestions!
